Bay Area Musician Mr. David Wins Children's Music Web Award

The Great Adventures of Mr. David is named "Best Recording for Younger Children 5-8"

San Jose, CA (November 16, 2006)—Popular Bay Area children's musician Mr. David has just won the Children's Music Web Award for "Best Recording for Younger Children 5-8" for his latest album, The Great Adventures of Mr. David.

The Children's Music Web Awards (CMWAs) are the only international awards that are guided by adults and chosen by kids. Organized by The Children's Music Web, a popular nonprofit resource for kids, families and children's performers, the awards are decided in a multi-step judging process. First, family judges screen the candidates and make preliminary decisions. Then, classrooms and daycare centers worldwide pick their favorites. Unlike most children's awards, which are decided by adult-only panels of judges, the CMWAs involve children in every step of the judging process. More information about the awards can be found online at www.childrensmusic.org.

"I appreciate the recognition," said David Alexandrou (Mr. David), "but ultimately, it's not awards that tell me my music is good, it's the kids I play for everyday."

The Great Adventures of Mr. David, the second album of this singer/songwriter, is a Bob Dylanesque, indie rock album for kids that's winning praise across the country. Reviewers are calling it "a stunning and artistic album," (The Lovely Mrs. Davis), "another indie rock masterpiece that kids, grownups, college students . . . that everyone will fall more in love with every time they listen to it," (Warren Truiit, the New York Public Library) and an album that's "got a sense of wonder and playfulness that will interest kids (and their adults) for a long time." (Zoogobble)

All of Mr. David's albums are for sale online at CD Baby (www.cdbaby.com), iTunes and through Mr. David's web site, www.mrdavidmusicworks.com.
